The Strange and Mysterious side of Chronic Illness.

Chapter 3: Mercury as a spiritual weapon.

by: Isyyes Keidar

Not many know this, but mercury is actually a powerful drug. Just a hundred years ago it was used by mainstream medicine to subdue and suppress every possible illness known to man, including: digestive problems, skin illnesses, sexual dysfunctions, mental and nervous disorders, and (laugh, laugh) immunological, constitutional plagues like syphilis and psora.

Now we all know that mercury is a stimulant, but like in many cases with powerful drugs, a stimulant actually is used as a suppressor. The logic is foolishly simple: a powerful stimulant places so much stress on the system that it, in its turn, must respond by a complete system shut down. Most drugs work in this way, alcohol being a prime example. The initial boost of energy is soon followed by a melt down, and a happy, not so happy slumber.

Any time we add mercury to the body, we create a trauma. Mercury is an active, volatile, and explosive entity which moves way faster than our normal biology. As such, it adds too much information; more than we can take. The result is always the same: a complete shut down of the local area, and often of the entire system.

Now, you can understand why mercury is such a perfect drug, and you can also begin to understand why mercury is a very effective weapon... To shut down the human system can be a very important skill, especially if you are, for example, a developer of chemical weapons...

Is it any wonder that mercury can be found, as an ingredient, and indeed, often a chief ingredient, in so many gun powders, ammunition, explosives, etc.?

Well, truth be told, mercury is an important part of the military industry for many reasons. It is volatile, that is, it can start an explosion. It is a good preservative, and can withstand difficult climate conditions, etc, etc. It is quite the perfect metal for the military.

Alas, mercury is not only a military weapon; it is also a spiritual weapon.

What do we mean by this?

We mean that mercury has the innate ability to interfere with your brain and nervous system, to the point that it overpowers your spiritual faculties.

As we explained, mercury contains so much information, and is so fast, that it attacks the nervous system with incredible force. In fact, the nerves are it's prime target and for two important reasons.

One is their electrical conductivity, which the mercury uses to travel around the body. In essence, nerves are a highway for poisons that carry an electrical affinity such as mercury and other heavy metals.

Mercury also favors the nerves because they are rich in minerals like magnesium and calcium. Mercury feels chemically drawn to mineral salts, and often likes to replace them, although at other times, it binds to them, creating the infamous and lethal mercury salts.

Interesting how the mercury has a split mind: it attracts and repels; loves and hates; joins in, but then destroys. It reminds me of Gollum from Lord of the Rings, a character, no doubt, based on the 'Mad Hatter' syndrome, and the other schizophrenic illnesses that sprung forth like flies in the late 19th century and the beginning of the 20th century. Back then, no one was sure why...

Hmm, let me think. Wait, isn't it the same period in history when the white man took over the world, and poisoned it with bad industry. Hmm, also the same era when amalgam fillings became a wide spread phenomena... Hmm. Could there exist a connection...? Schizophrenia is the ultimate illness of the split mind, can it be related to a poison which actually has a split mind of its own...? I wonder.

Well, such is the toxic mercury: it's destructiveness comes from its instability. Strange and dangerous creature is the mercury atom, which is why it should never have been introduced to our biology.

Once mercury enters the nerves, it truly takes hold. It then travels through the blood brain barrier, and enters the depths of our brain. When it reaches the inner brain, it again shocks the system and takes over. It then begins to run its own programs, if you will. Mercury programs are very easy to identify. They all have a repetitive circular quality to them. That is, they stutter and repeat themselves like autistic kids do (did we mention that mercury causes autism...). Or else, an obsessive but elaborate scheme is invented, which appears quite intelligent, yet always ends up with futile results.

These are fantasies: illusions of grandeur, false logic creating so called inventions and breakthroughs, which are but mere flukes of the mind. These fantasies then are reintroduced as new, over and over again, through the course of illness.

The mercury must run these repetitive patterns to expand its control. Any substance, whether dead or alive, must, by the law of atrophy, expand itself. Mercury may have a consciousness or may not, but that is beside the point. The point being mercury acts as to expand its control; always!

Eventually these repetitive loops and illusions enter the brain center in charge of our spiritual life. Then and there the classic mercury response happens: too much info, major shut down. The spiritual channels do get an initial boost. For a second, you might feel like a mighty God. A second later, you are on the floor, gasping for breath. The result, as seen with so many mercury patients, is a complete annihilation of the spiritual.

A year, two, ten pass, and the soul is nowhere to be found. You forget about destiny, your dreams, and your visions. You forget about God. Some of us do not believe in God to begin with, and that is ok. Yet the spiritual damage is there, not matter of faith. It relates to the quality of your consciousness and to such trivial things as hope, inspiration, and love...

I am going to say it, and please be very clear about this; spiritual demise is a symptom of toxins entering the spiritual channels. No one willingly denies their spiritual world. No one willingly goes against God and the Universe. We are always forced to abandon our soul through hurt and trauma. There is no way that we would do so of our own accord.

Now for the great revelation...

I am not a great fan of conspiracy theories. I do not adorn by the motto: the rich are crooked and powerful are vicious. Yet, when it comes to knowingly using a dangerous poison in the medical and dental fields, I must raise an eyebrow. One thing is clear: everyone knew about mercury and what it can do, for centuries. Mercury was (and still is) extensively researched during the centuries, prior to our recent age.

We cannot ignore the simple fact that there are plenty of references to mercury as a stimulator and destroyer of the spirit of man, in the writings of the alchemists.

We cannot ignore that overwhelming mentioning of mercury as a mental stimulant, supposedly inducing super natural abilities.

We said that a powerful stimulant always ends up suppressing. A powerful stimulant of the psyche will end up suppressing it. And this is exactly what happened with mercury. Did it happen by accident? Again, that is beside the point, yet it did happen to billions of us.

When you install mercury in people's nerves (Oh, the teeth are connected to the nerves, what a coincidence), you attack their spiritual faculties. Did they do so on purpose, or just hap hazardously? Who cares! Mercury irritates the soul, and then demolishes it. It is a neuro-chemical fact, and clinical observation of mercury patients confirms it again and again.

Mercury is a weapon, which interferes with our body, our brain, and with our spirit. It is time somebody said it as it is: mercury poisoning is a violent crime. I am looking at you, those who support it and manifest it. I hope this essay made it clear that we know all about the mischievous game called amalgam.

There are billions of us, and we are coming your way....
